Tucked away on a quiet cul-de-sac in La Cañada, a small subdivision in the upper part of Los Frailes, Casa Liz blends contemporary architecture with traditional details and a touch of bohemian charm. Spread across three levels, the home offers a thoughtful layout, abundant natural light, and unobstructed views of the surrounding landscape. On the first level, a two-car garage/carport welcomes you before entering through restored antique wooden doors that set the tone for the character found throughout the home. To the right, a kitchen with adjoining laundry/pantry, and to the left, a guest half-bathroom featuring a sink carved from reclaimed wooden beams and a copper faucet shaped like a traditional water jar. Beyond, the open living and dining area boasts nearly double-height ceilings and polished concrete floors that run throughout the house. South-facing sliding glass doors open to a central courtyard, filling the space with air and light. Extending from here, a TV/media room opens directly to a covered outdoor grill...
